

Comparison of Michigan to the United States

For the 24 indicators where Michigan can be compared with the U.S., Michigan is better than the nation on ten and the nation is better than Michigan on ten.

Michigan Is Better

Abortions
Adequacy of Prenatal Care
AIDS Deaths
Childhood Immunizations
Mammography
Suicide Deaths
Teen Pregnancy
Tuberculosis Deaths
Unintentional Injury Deaths
Pneumonia and Influenza Deaths

United States Is Better

Cancer Deaths
Kidney Disease Deaths
Homicide Deaths
Diabetes Deaths (Underlying Cause)
Chlamydia
Chronic Liver Disease and Cirrhosis Deaths
Heart Disease Deaths
Infant Mortality
Overweight/Obesity
Cigarette Smoking among Adults

There is no statistically significant difference (with 95 % statistical confidence) between the U.S. rate and the Michigan rate for adolescent use of alcohol, tobacco, and other drugs, alcohol-induced deaths, chronic lower respiratory disease deaths, and stroke deaths.

Note: Comparisons between the U.S. and Michigan use the most recent data available for both the nation and the state. Indicators derived from the Behavioral Risk Factor Surveillance System are compared among the median of other states for the latest survey available.

Last Updated: August 2003.